

Cathy Wolfe is EVP & President for Emerging & Developing Markets at Wolters Kluwer, a global information software and services company, where she is responsible for establishing a long-term presence in key emerging and high growth markets to accelerate the company's transformation in the areas of globalization.

A transformational leader and strong operational manager, Cathy has turned around and expanded multiple businesses through strategic review, digital product development, portfolio management, operational excellence and building a strong team and culture.

With more than 20 years of experience in vertical product solutions for print, online and digital formats, Cathy has a customer-centered approach to development and transformation. In 2015, Wolters Kluwer integrated two business lines under Ms. Wolfe's leadership to form the Health Learning, Research & Practice business, the largest business unit in Wolters Kluwer with more than 1200 employees globally. During this same year, Cathy and her leadership team completed the acquisition of a leading independent provider of continuing medical education (CME) to US physicians, expanding its portfolio of information and digital solutions to practitioners. More recently, Cathy has expanded HLRP's education solutions by acquiring market-leading adaptive learning platforms in the nursing and medical education sectors.

A veteran of Wolters Kluwer since 1993, Cathy has held key leadership positions in the US and the UK, with a track record of delivering strong results and innovation. During her time at Wolters Kluwer, Cathy has led numerous large and complex technology and product development initiatives that have resulted in the launch of innovative digital solutions that combine software, services and information. She led, for example, a team that developed the tax and accounting industry's first Internet tax research system in 1996.

Cathy holds an MBA from the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business and earned a BA degree in English from Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.